Axis Technical Group Launches New Web Site

Updated site to offer focused information on service offerings and provide a springboard to future client functionality.

ANAHEIM, CA. September XX, 2009 – Axis Technical Group, a technology consulting firm specializing in strategic consulting services and staffing solutions, today launched their updated corporate website at www.axistechnical.com.

The new website utilizes the latest in Microsoft .Net 3.5 technologies including ASP.net and AJAX, and features a fresh interface designed to give its customers, employees, prospective candidates and partners easier access to company news and information. The site launch is the first phase in a lengthier initiative to introduce technological innovations that will offer additional service and value to our customers.

“Our new website is more representative of the reasons Axis stands out in our industry, and fortifies our strength as a company – customer service to both our clients and our candidates,” said Michael Valdes, Axis Technical Group President. The website will grow to include newly integrated portals for customers, job seekers and employees in addition to information about Axis Technical Group Inc’s global offices in India (www.axilontech.com) and Mexico (www.axistechnical.com.mx)

Axis Technical, ranked 12th on the Orange County Business Journal’s 2007 Top 100 Fastest Growing Private Companies in Orange County, California, will be adding additional functionality and access to a wide host of information, including new applications for timesheet reporting, resource requests, and a hotlist of top candidates in the near future. “Our vision for the new site is that it will become a regular destination for all of our customers, employees, candidates and partners to learn about new company and industry happenings and more importantly as a means to communicate with one another,” reveals Russell Wolf, Vice President of Business Development. The new site will be an entry way to the Axis Community Portal and employee Blogs.
