Axis Technical Group Renews Microsoft Gold Level Partner Certification

Axis commitment to Microsoft technologies stronger than ever with focus on key competencies

ANAHEIM, CA. November 5, 2009 – Axis Technical Group, a technology consulting firm specializing in staffing services and custom software development, today announced that Microsoft has renewed Axis' Gold Level Partner Certification for 2010. The certification is for key competencies in Custom Software Development, Data Management, Service Oriented Architecture (SOA) and Business Process, as well as for Advanced Infrastructure Solutions.

The Gold Level Partner status ensures the close working relationship between Axis and Microsoft, and stands as a testament to the outstanding work and expertise of the Axis in Motion strategic consulting team. "Our team has a lengthy history of successful projects and client engagements which led to the certifications we earned from Microsoft," explains Axis President, Michael Valdes. "This status represents to our clients, the expertise and high level of competence in our service offerings."

"Our team has worked hard at providing state-of-the-art solutions utilizing the Microsoft platform and this partnership with Microsoft further cements our expertise in these technologies," says Kenneth Tu, Axis Vice President of Technology. He adds that, "We are dedicated to the ongoing training of our staff and foster an environment that encourages our engineers to pursue education and training in all of the latest and emerging technologies."
